ASTROLOGICAL ADVICE ON LIFE, LOVE AND EVERYTHING IN BETWEEN

Q I am a Pisces who works in a corporate environment with many other people that are different sun signs. I seem to relate a lot better with the Capricorns and Geminis but the others drive me nuts with their pettiness. Especially the gossiping Aries. Is it just the corporate world environment that I need to get use to or are too many sun signs under one roof? Please help me relate with them to make my job easier!

A It's a little bit of both. First of all; the corporate world is no where for a Pisces to be. You cannot handle the confinement and controlling ways of the corporate environment, it is draining every ounce of energy out of you. In astrology, Pisces relate best with Capricorns and Geminis in a work environment, so it is no surprise that those are the two signs you mentioned. What you need to understand about your Aries coworkers is that they are there for success, not for friendship. No matter who they need to talk about or stab in the back be assured they will if the end result is a raise or promotion for them. Steer clear of the Aries if you can, it's in their nature to be so condescending and selfish, but it's no place for an emotional Pisces to be on the receiving end of the gossiping.

You will come into contact with will many different sun sign personalities in the corporate world, it's inevitable with so many people in one company, but to make your days go by smoother, try staying around the Capricorns, Geminis, Cancers, and fellow Pisceans to get through the day. And good luck to you, I hope that you can break free of the corporate world soon so that you can do work that allows your Pisces fins to swim into calmer waters that flow with your peaceful energy.

Q Hi, I'm dating a Sagittarius man and I am a Capricorn female. Can you please tell me why he never stays home, always out with his friends or at some kind of event? I am always invited to go with him but I would rather not most of the time, shouldn't he grow up? He's started calling me boring and lazy. Is it because our signs don't match up or should I steer clear of Sagittarius men? He makes me feel so useless.

A Hunny, I hate to tell you this, but.... your Sagittarius man will NEVER grow up! Sagittarians have a love for life; they are constantly on the run. Never wanting to miss out on the next big adventure. At least he asks you to come along; it shows he has nothing to hide. But when you tell him "No", that won't stop him, he can't miss out on anything! If you portray your Capricorn Sun Sign traits then you won't understand this desire to go out and experience new things. You are happy and content in your home reading a book or at the office all hours of the night. And to a Sagittarian this lifestyle is boring! You need to let your Sagittarian man be free and maybe even join him out on the town a few times...it can be fun and we all know Capricorn ladies hate to have fun, it's always work, work, work. Loosen up and you'll be happy you did. It's ultimately up to you if you want to be compatible and make it work. A Sagittarius will be as they will be just as you; a Capricorn will be as you wish to be. Best of luck in whatever you decide!

Although a child may have the same curly mane as mommy or even daddy's eyes, why is it that he acts nothing like either parent? Believe it or not, DNA has nothing to do with the striking personality your little tyke exhibits, but rather blame it on the stars! Astrological signs will provide insight on why your little Leo is already the dominant player in his playgroup or why your kiddie Cancer can be moved to tears simply by listening to a sad melody. The stars will not only give you insight to your child's personality, but also teach you a thing or two about how to nurture and grow his distinct personality to the fullest.
